- 25X1 1. On 15 November 1951 the 258 Regiment, 86 Division, 29 Army, was transferred to Amoy. The 256 Regiment occupied the defense line near Tungan (118-10, 24-44) which was formerly garrisoned by the 258 Regiment.
 - 2. (n 20 November six gunboats from Foochow arrived at Haich'eng (117-52, 24-27) and (ulanghau (118-04, 24-27). They joined the coastal public security forces recently organized there to strengthen winter defenses.
 - 3. On 25 November twelve medium-sized armored cars from Chekiang arrived at Foodnow and were stationed there temporarily.
 - h. In late November two regiments began moving toward coastal areas of south Fukien. These regiments were stationed in Lungch'i (117-42, 24-32) and Change'u (117-35, 24-06). The movement was believed to be only the result of troop rotation among the various defense areas.
 - 5. In late November families of senior cacre personnel previously living near 10 Army Group headquarters at Peimen (北月), and Foochow, all moved to civilian cuarters at Peitalu (北大路), Ch'ient'anghsiang (海塘声) and Chiuts'aiyuan (九村) 家). At this time one company of military police, belonging to the 10 Army Group, was stationed near Chiuts'aiyuan.
 - 6. As of November, an air defense technical personnel training school of the Amoy Carrison Command had graduated its second class of lhO students. All graduates were assigned to coastal air defense organizations at Amoy, Kulanghsu, Tungan, Haich'eng and other coastal points.
 - 7. The Fukien Military District recently commandeered the T'aohuashan (形龙山) srea near Mach'angchieh (身敞街) in Ts'angch'ienshan (鬼前山). The Farracks and Cuarters Management Administration of the Fukien Military District had advertised for bids on the construction of permanent quarters and barracks on half of the southwest slope of T'aohuashan. These barracks, when completed, will contain space for 1,500 persons.
